Giulio Caccini was an important song composer as well as a singer, voice teacher and instrumentalist in Italy in the early part of the Baroque era. An active participant in the meetings of the Camerata, Caccini wrote works for the solo voice which showed a great sensitivity for the declamation of the text. In 1602, he described the new monodic style of that time in the preface of his famous Le nuove musiche, a set of madrigals and airs for solo voice with basso continuo.

Caccini's beautiful Ave Maria has become one of his most beloved solo works in recent years. This choral arrangement features a keyboard and optional flute part provided by the arranger. It is appropriate for both school and church performance.
